LO: What role did arrogance and preparation play on the amount of impact humcanes had on their areas?

I think that humcanes have been known to cause damage that could have been avoided by preperation and arrogance of the citezens of the area affected. In Mexico, 2015 humcane Patricia ripped through Mexico causing alot of damage, although, they were used to extreme weather so were well prepared for the humcane: In hotels, tounsts couldn't evacuate so they improvised their hotel rooms by piling up matresses around the walls to try and stop the glass windows shattering on them. Luckily, In Mexico, they listened to instructions for evacuation and most people reluctantly left their homes for shelters just in time. As a NEE, they only had access to the compulsary supplies. Where as New York had access to much more. In New york 2012, Hurricane Sandy caused Major damage - Unfortunately, many citezens chose to ignore warnings and be arrogant and not leave. The damage fees for this HIC cost around $71 bullion with a short term primary impact of fire due to electrical disturbance and floods due to burst pipes. The longterm flood damage caused people to have no electricity. There wouldn't have been so many casualties if people listened to the government and evacuated before it was too late.

The government could of helped NYC by making sure that the residents had access to all areas of warnings and made sure people actually evacuated rather than leaving the checks til after.
